- Green bonds: New study shows extraordinary growth and signals potential in financing Europe's climate and environment goals

A study released by the Commission today shows that green bonds have enjoyed extraordinary growth, since they were first issued in 2007. The study on the potential and functioning of green bond markets also identifies key bottlenecks and measures to overcome them so they can fulfil their huge potential. The results come out two days after the Commission's Clean Energy for All Europeans package which finds that an extra EUR 177 billion is needed annually from 2021 onwards to reach the 2030 climate and energy goals.
